BEST ATTITUDE FOR SLEEP

French Physician Says Position Which One Finds Most Comfortable Is Best.

As practically everyone is more or less addicted to the habit of sleeping, the question of the best and most healthful attitude during slumber is of general importance. There is an ancient and widespread idea that to sleep on one side interferes with the heart action and is consequently injurious and that to sleep on the back develops the inclination to snore.

Modern authorities are not at all agreed on the matter, however, one of the greatest heart specialists declaring that it is quite immaterial whether a person sleeps on the right or left side, while another equally famous doctor asserts emphatically that one should always lie on the right side if heart trouble and indigestion is to be avoided.

Eliminating the question of snoring—a habit quite possible to break one's self of—there is little doubt that the most restful position, when once a person has become accustomed to it, is flat upon the back, using no pillow, and with the arms above the head. This straightens drooping shoulders and gives the lungs full play.

However, this is a matter in which one may do as one pleases, and have good authority therefor, as a very distinguished French physician has dismissed the subject by saying that the best position for sleeping is that which a person finds most comfortable.

Girls of Other Days.
When mother was young and girlish felt sad, for so late to verse they would turn; had beautiful fountain of comfort they had, which soothed the most turbulent yearn. When mother felt morbid and downcast and punk, away to the garret she'd steal, and struggle down close by an old leather trunk and read a few yards of "Lucile"—Success.
